My Greenwich Village: Dave, Bob and Me

Terri Thal in Conversation with Steve Suffet

A personal story of the 1960s Greenwich Village folk music world, told by the woman who was Bob Dylan's first manager and Dave Van Ronk's then-wife and manager. Terri Thal was an intrinsic member of that world. She hosted folk singers such as Tom Paxton, Phil Ochs, and Danny Kalb in her apartment. She was involved with socialist groups and the civil rights movement. Later, she merged her social justice commitment with her work for not-for-profit organizations. She is a fascinating speaker and has written a fascinating book. Tonight she'll be speaking with Old Fashioned Folk Singer Steve Suffet, who will perform a few songs from the era.

This event is supported by The Folk Music Society of New York.

Kevin Allred

Kevin Allred is an independent singer/songwriter based in Brooklyn, with an unlikely combination of influences spanning the women's singer/songwriter explosion of the 1990s and Lilith Fair, punk rock, outlaw Country, Woody Guthrie, Nina Simone, and Odetta. His songs peel back artifice - whether social, interpersonal, individual, or political - and cut to the core of our shared experience with earnest charm. He likes to say he plays "sad gay music for the end of the world," chock-full of humor and a whole lot of heart.

Laura Ciporen

Folk music, union songs, sea shanties and the like have been an integral part of Laura Ciporen's life for as long as she can remember. The soundtrack to family car rides was Pete Seeger; Peter, Paul, and Mary; and Leonard Cohen. Farm & Wilderness camp (where Rise Up Singing started) deeply entrenched her in women's empowerment and community singing. She's been part of the NY folk community, Exceedingly Good Song Night, and sea music festivals for years. Expect an eclectic mix of songs about and for work, songs where women make a difference, and assorted others to sing along to. This is her first performance.

Coming in January:

January 4
