The Bev Grant Trio

“Bev Grant still looks like a kid, but she has been a constant source of inspiration to me for almost 40 years ... a brilliant feminist pioneer with a true rock and roll heart! What's not to love?”—Anne Feeney. Winner of the 2017 ASCAP Jay Gorney songwriter award and the 2017 Joe Hill Award, Bev Grant grew up singing and playing in Portland, Oregon, where she began her performing career as a child in a band with her two sisters. After moving to New York City, she devoted herself to topical songwriting and social activism, notably in her band The Human Condition. Bev is featured on the Grammy-nominated Best of Broadside album and is the founder of the Brooklyn Women's Chorus. She recently retired as director, after 25 years. Her song “We Were There” has become an anthem of women in the labor movement, and many of her award-winning songs can be found on her recordings. Bev's newest CD is It's Personal. Tonight she will be performing with Carolann Solebello, bass and vocals; Katherine Etzel, drums and vocals, and special guest Steve Mayone, electric guitar and mandolin. bevgrant.com

The Mario Giacalone Trio

Mario Giacalone has been a singer, songwriter, musician since the early seventies. He has recorded as a solo artist, and with Inner Gypsy, Regina Palin, and Bill Horowitz. He is a founding member of The Communications Workshop, and has been a member of the bands The Human Condition, Floating, Mario Brothers, Giacalone and Sard, and Mario & Amy. Mario's music has been featured in theater productions of Neighbors, Coming Attractions, and The Music in Me. His music has appeared in the videos “Crack is the Wack,” “5 out of 5,” “The Ballad of Nikki Teen,” and in the film 30 Nights of Sex to Save a Marriage. Tonight he'll be performing with Jack LaTona on bass and Alan Lebow on electric guitar. mariogiacalone.com

Mario Cancel-Bigay

Mario Cancel-Bigay is a Puerto Rican singer-songwriter, poet and PhD candidate in ethnomusicology at Columbia University. He is an expert on the Puerto Rican national guitar, the cuatro, which he has been playing for 25 years. His songs, composed in Spanish and English, are influenced by Latin American nueva canción, Puerto Rican jíbaro (peasant) music, rock, jazz, blues, and American protest music. Often, Mario sings poems that he sets to music. His lyrics address anticolonialism, social justice and Global South solidarity, in addition to questioning gender constructs and celebrating Afro-Caribbean legacies.

Judy Gorman

Said Pete Seeger: "Judy is a wonderful singer and musician. No two programs that she gives are the same. Judy is always thinking how to find the right phrase, the right song to hit the nail right on the head, to shoot the arrow straight to the heart of the matter." Judy has performed for the UN, festivals, universities, concert halls, and events for justice in 49 states and 13 countries. Judy has shared stages with Pete Seeger, Odetta, Richie Havens, Harry Belafonte, Whoopi Goldberg, Sweet Honey in The Rock, Suzanne Vega, the Indigo Girls, Meryl Streep, and James Earl Jones.
